I’ve never done a home renovation! But, I’ve seen enough of them to know that it’s not an endeavor a wise one walks into lightly. There are multiple factors worth considering, macro and micro decisions to be made, and critical relationships that must be formed. Then, one must demonstrate the skill of balancing a respect for deadlines with the reality of unforeseen circumstances.

In my observations of these renovations, there appear to be several steps and principles that can aid in the project’s success. While many, a few include: 1. Being certain on what’s needed that doesn’t currently exist or that could be enhanced; 2. Developing a vision and schema that address how the end result improves wants or functionality; 3. Consulting and retaining those possessing expertise, skills, knowledge; and 4. Understanding the necessity of momentary disorder (or perceived disorder) in realizing the intended outcome.

Academic year 2011-12 has been one of ‘diversity renovations’ at RISD and in this office. Our campus support for diversity, representation, and dignity has an expanded foundation and emerging new look. The resolutions of RISD’s Strategic Plan, the assessment of campus surveys, and the launching of a Diversity Steering Committee have made us more cognizant and intentional about what is needed and desired to improve our practice. Many of us spent the year imagining and developing new approaches for deepening student support. Some endeavored to articulate the unique opportunities (and responsibilities) we have as a premier art and design community to blaze new paths both on campus and beyond. We dared to assume a leadership role in areas of student support and inclusive practice through organizational restructuring and reinforcing our long-term commitments. And finally, as we continue to build to our schematic, we are gently reminded that achieving our new design isn’t the only goal. We must be patient and give ourselves permission to embrace the gifts, education and growth that that are inherent in the process itself.
With pleasure, I report that last spring semester, the Office of Multicultural Affairs (OMA) was expanded into and renamed the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement (ISE). This expansion brought to ISE the Office of International Student Services and a diversity coordinator—a new position focusing on underserved student communities including LGBTQ, religious/spiritual, and first generation to college. These important shifts and incredible staff members have poised the office and RISD to respond more broadly and deeply to the needs, hopes, and development of our collective student body.

My most sincere appreciation is extended to Jean Eddy, Jerri Drummond, and ISE staff for their earnest dedication to resourcing student support and expanding the opportunities for RISD students, staff, faculty, and alumni to be active participants in advancing community. As always, ISE thanks those who have publically or privately, with or without acknowledgement, corporately or individually advanced RISD’s demonstration of multiculturalism. We continue to be inspired by the passion and devotion that so many display toward ensuring a campus community based in dignity and opportunity for all.

Artfully,

Tony Johnson

The Office of Intercultural Student Engagement

“We believe in the power of art and design to unleash our inherent curiosity, constantly broadening and reshaping our understanding of the human experience. We envision an artistic community where the breadth of human dignity is creatively realized, inspiring everyone to collectively and proactively develop their sense of individual potential and global mindfulness.”

-ISE Vision Statement

“We foster multicultural understanding and personalized support at RISD by engaging its community through programming, advocacy, and specialized services.”

-ISE Mission Statement

The Office Intercultural Student Engagement promotes cultural awareness, dialogue, and interaction while serving as a hands-on resource for specific RISD communities. Primary target communities include: students of color; international students; students identifying within the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Questioning (LGBTQ) spectrum; religious and/or spiritual students; and those dedicated to inclusive community. Included in the ISE office is the Office of International Student Services, which specifically addresses international student success and immigration.

The office provides leadership in the areas of student success, retention programs, campus education, and immigration compliance. The office works closely with RISD’s faculty, staff, and administrators. As a resource, it advises students on social, cultural, and personal matters, financial aid issues, and academic procedures. It assists in student and leadership development through supporting and advising student cultural groups.
“RISD is committed to a multi-culturally and philosophically diverse environment that is respectful of all the members of its community: students, faculty, curators, and staff”

-RISD mission statement

The Office of International Student Services

The Office of International Student Services (OISS) provides tailored services for international students. Office services include: immigration guidance & compliance, international student orientation, cross-cultural transition support & programming, and international student success.

The Office of International Student Services serves as an advocate for international students, advising them on the wide variety of experiences they may encounter during their studies in the United States. OISS advises on social, cultural, financial, academic, immigration and personal matters. The office supports international students and their success at RISD.
“The Third World Program is a concept that was initiated during the tumultuous 1960’s as with most ethnic oriented programs across the country. The few third world students at RISD during that time saw the need to develop a viable program that would not only help finance the education of future third world students: of African, Asian, and South American ancestry, but provide the necessary counseling service, both academic and personal, that was also lacking. RISD has understood the need for such a program and has aided its development along with federal assistance.”

John Torres - Director
Third World Program 1968-73
While currently named The Office of Intercultural Student Engagement (ISE), RISD’s first department dedicated to assuring access, support, and other assistance to minority students was established in 1968 as the Third World Program. While the office has adjusted its name over the years, its mission and contribution have remained firm. Helping RISD achieve its goal of attracting and developing the most promising artists and designers has been the core of this office’s work. Its specific historical charge of assisting students of color and international students has served to provide a more inclusive environment for these students and has equally enhanced the educational and social experiences of the RISD commonwealth. Since the 1960’s, five administrators have led the office with titles ranging from Dean to Coordinator to Director. ISE is indebted to the dedication, commitment, and contributions of these administrators, as they have championed, advocated for, and supported the needs of our various student populations. Their service helped guide the college toward realizing an inclusive and supportive environment where all can contribute to and benefit from the uniqueness of RISD.
1968
RISD initiates the Third World Program with three positions: Dean – John Torres, Assistant Dean – Ann Souza, and Secretary. The program’s mission focuses on disadvantaged students. Program responsibilities include: recruitment, admissions evaluations & admittance in conjunction with Admissions Office, financial aid distribution, advising (on academic, personal, social, financial matters), and fundraising.

1976
The Third World Program folds due to resignation of the program Dean.

1977
The Minority Affairs Office is created as a one-person office reporting to the Dean of Students. Dorothy Ford assumes this position as Secretary/Assistant to the Associate Dean of Students.

1979
The Minority Affairs Office expands responsibilities and reports to VP for Student Affairs.

1980
The Minority Affairs Office becomes the Office of Multicultural Affairs (OMA) and assumes responsibility for supporting and advising minority and international student populations including Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) processing. The Assistant title changes to Coordinator of Multicultural Affairs and reports to Director of Student Development and Counseling Services. Office housed in College Building.
The Office of International Programs is created to oversee international student populations and INS processes. OMA resumes responsibility for supporting and advising minority students.

2001
Resulting from the 1999 RISD Diversity Committee Report, OMA is upgraded to a department housed in Carr House with position upgrade to Director. Mr. Deba Patniak becomes OMA’s first Director.

2004
Tony Johnson (’93 Sculp) becomes OMA’s second director.

2006
RISD Multicultural Center and Multicultural Gallery are established in Ewing House. OMA and the Office of International Programs assume oversight and management for Ewing Multicultural Center.

2008
Multicultural Gallery is officially named Yellow House Gallery. First Diversity Awards program conducted.

2011
OMA is relocated to Carr House.

2012
OMA is renamed the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement (ISE) and hires a diversity coordinator to oversee student support and campus education. ISE assumes oversight of the Office of International Student Services (ISS). Kate Sacco is named ISS Associate Director.
Tony Johnson

Tony Johnson is the Director of Intercultural Student Engagement at Rhode Island School of Design. In this role, he participates in constructing and implementing the college’s efforts toward a multicultural and philosophically diverse environment that is respectful of all its members; Tony works to ensure a college campus that is enriched through experiencing and understanding society through strategic use of the range of cultures the college represents and building strong bridges to Rhode Island’s greater community.

Tony is a 1993 RISD sculpture alumnus. Prior to his current role, he held a variety of positions including co-founding an arts consultant business, conducting art design and professional development training for MetLife Insurance, and serving as RISD’s first admissions officer dedicated to diversity enrollment.

In addition to his work with art institutions, he is a former board member of the Rhode Island Black Heritage Society, a juror on The Rhode Island Foundations’ First Generation Scholarship Committee, and a member of the Multicultural Affairs Think Tank through the New England Resource Center for Higher Education (UMass/Boston).
Kate Sacco

Kate is the Associate Director of the Office of International Student Services (OISS) within the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement at the Rhode Island School of Design. She holds a Bachelor’s degree in Spanish from the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire and a Master’s degree in Intercultural Relations from Lesley University.

Kate’s role in OISS is to assist the international student population with cultural adjustment and immigration compliance. With the Director, she also promotes positive cultural exchange experiences by creating opportunities for international students and domestic students to share their knowledge, language, culture and background within the United States, within Providence and within the RISD community.

She is originally from Wisconsin, but has also lived, worked and traveled in range of places, including Massachusetts, Oregon, Rhode Island, Australia, China, Serbia and Mexico. Most of her work has been in the field of Intercultural Relations and she is involved in the professional organization, NAFSA: Association of International Educators. Prior to her current role, she has worked at Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE) and ELS Language Centers.
Janet Hoyte

Janet is currently the International Student Advisor in the Office of International Student Services within the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement. She was previously the Assistant Director for Student Life (now Center for Student Involvement), where she was an integral part of the Office of Student Life at RISD. Before that she was the Department Coordinator for OSL, a position she held until late 2009. She has been instrumental in helping to organize important events here at RISD such as Artist Ball and the Student Art Sale. Before coming to RISD she worked as an associate at StrategicPoint and StrategicPoint Retirement Planning Services. She has also held an Event Coordinator Assistant position at Seaport Hotel and World Trade Center in Boston.

She received her A.S. in Tourism and Travel Management from Barbados Community College and her B.S. in Travel Tourism Marketing from Johnson & Wales University where she graduated Summa Cum Laude, and earned her M.B.A. in Global Business with a Concentration in Financial Management also from J&W. She is currently involved in several organizations including NAFSA: Association of International Educators, NASPA: Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education and ACPA: American College Personnel Association

Janet prides herself on being an outstanding team player with exceptional interpersonal and communication skills. She is an independent thinker with a strong positive attitude who is able to learn quickly and adapt rapidly to changing situations.
Christopher Lauth is the Diversity Coordinator for the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement. In this role, he seeks to facilitate student success by providing support and outreach to RISD community members. An integral part of facilitating this success is working to provide a supportive, safe, welcoming and affirming environment of equal treatment and access for various communities including: lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and questioning (LGBTQ); racial/ethnic minority; religious; and first-to-college. Through support, advocacy and educational opportunities, Chris seeks to increase the college’s awareness, understanding and competency among important multi-cultural issues. Chris has received his Bachelor’s Degree from Flagler College (2009) in U.S. Southern Cultural History and his Master’s from Canisius College (2012) in College Student Personnel Administration. Prior to his current role, he served as the GLBTQ Leadership Development Coordinator at Canisius College as well as the Founder and Executive Director of Club UNITY, Flagler College’s Gay/Straight Alliance from 2007-2009.
Malcolm Shanks

Malcolm Shanks is the Administrative Coordinator for Intercultural Student Engagement. Malcolm attended Brown University, where he majored in Middle Eastern Studies and Gender & Sexuality Studies. While at Brown, Malcolm led initiatives on race, class, gender, and sexuality as a Minority Peer Counselor Friend and executive board member of Other Brothers, a queer men of color collective. In Providence, he has facilitated workshops for social justice organizations about including the needs and experiences of queer people of color in their political visions and organizing practice.

As the administrative arm of the office, Malcolm is responsible for ensuring that the budgetary, communication, bureaucratic processes are flow as smoothly as possible. Malcolm works in his role to connect students to necessary university resources, specifically supporting international and other marginalized student communities. He serves as a liaison and an initial point of contact between the campus community and the Office of Intercultural Student Engagement.
