

Certificate in Collegiate Teaching in Art & Design (2018 – 2019)

The 6-credit RISD Certificate in Collegiate Teaching in Art & Design builds on the momentum and past history of graduate student and faculty interest in developing a reflective teaching practice and reflects current practice at other institutions of higher education offering graduate teaching certificates. It uses the College as a site for the examination, practice, advancement and research into collegiate level studio pedagogy. The certificate program benefits from its access to the vitality and pedagogical practices of the RISD faculty, which provide participating graduate students with models of teaching that can inform the creation a personal teaching philosophy and their development as future faculty.

The certificate provides for those graduate students with interests in pursuing teaching opportunities in higher education an institutional endorsement, which when examined alongside other academic and professional qualifications, provides them with a value-added edge. Graduate students assigned as instructors or co-instructors for a Wintersession course and pursuing the certificate will receive certificates that are endorsed “Conferred with Collegiate Teaching Experience.”
